

Red Obelisk Beech

Tall, dark and slender are attributes of this handsome columnar purple beech. Similar to Dawyck Purple Beech, it is a bit more compact in form. Leaves emerge reddish-purple and are distinguished by undulating, slightly lobed margins.

Rising to about 35' in height as it approaches maturity, Red Obelisk Beech spreads only about 12', presenting a narrow column that's a great fit for narrow spaces, a striking hedge or visual screen.
